EXPERT OSBORNE HAS PURSE SNATCHER IS WOMAN IS SEARCHING

COMPLETED HIS EVIDENCE DEFEATED BY QUICK ACT OF WOMAN FOR BROTHER WHO DISAPPEARED

The introduction of testimony on the part of the state in the Martin robbery case, in the district court, is drawing to a close and it is more than likely that the prosecution will rest at the close of the court session this afternoon, and that the defendant will open his case tomorrow morning. Judge Willis states that it will require about three days to introduce testimony for the defendant, which will be Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, argument in the case to be given next Saturday.

The attorneys for the defendant gave Mr. Osborne, the expert witness, but little attention on cross examination and not more than a half dozen questions were propounded. The expert had been on the witness stand practically two days when he was turned over to the attorneys for the defendant for cross examination. Within a very short time, he was excused and another witness for the state called to the stand. The main question put by Judge Willis was whether, in his investigations of the handwritings in the case, Mr. Osborne had endeavored to make comparisons with writings outside of the case to determine whether the same similarities and dissimilarities might not be found in writings known to be other than Martin's. He said he had not.

R. L. Conely, a Salt Lake banker, was called as an expert witness on the question of handwriting. His testimony was corroborative of that given by Mr. Osborne, that the person who wrote the standard documents was the author of the disputed ones.

Attorneys for the defendant this morning objected to the admission of the expert testimony, contending that he was appearing before the jury more as an attorney than a witness, and that he was really arguing the case. Judge Willis, in making the objection, stated that Mr. Osborne, as a witness, was taking the position of prosecutor and he thought it was eminently unfair to the defendant.

On the other hand, Mr. Leatherwood for the state, argued that expert witnesses under modern rules are permitted to explain their positions and advance opinions before the jury. The court overruled the objection.

Mr. Osborne concluded his testimony by stating that he had found that some of the writings in the standard, as well as the disputed letters, were disguised, because they were "grotesque" and "distorted." He said that always, in disguising a handwriting, the author would write out of proportion, in respect to spacing, slant and size of letters. The expert made a minute explanation of the writings, telling of the many characteristics of the two that indicated they were written by the same person. He said that many repeated words found in the standard and disputed documents were almost identical, referring especially to the words "of" and "you," which he found in almost innumerable places in the two documents.

This afternoon R. T. Badger, a banker of Salt Lake, and Earl Jay Glade, a student of handwriting, were placed on the witness stand and testified in corroboration of the testimony given by Mr. Osborne, the cross examination of the witnesses being brief.

At the conclusion of Glade's testimony, Attorney Leatherwood for the state announced that he was through with the introduction of testimony in main. The only other testimony to be given by the prosecution will be rebuttal, after the defendant has given testimony in his behalf.

On request of Attorney Willis for the defendant, court adjourned until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Mr. Willis stated to the court that an effort had not been afforded to confer with all the witnesses for the defendant and he desired a little time to do that before opening the case for the defense.

It is said that there will be about twenty-five witnesses for the defendant, including Martin's character and also on the question of an alibi. The testimony of most of the witnesses will necessarily be brief and it is expected that it will be concluded in the course of a few days. Whether the defendant will be a witness, has not been disclosed.

UTAH ATTRACTIONS IN PAN-AMERICAN MAGAZINE

The current issue of the Pan-American Union magazine, a copy of which was received yesterday at the office of the Ogden Publicity bureau, in the Weber club, gives considerable publicity to Utah's scenic attractions. The front cover carries a fine picture of the Ogden-Lucien cutoff, which is duplicated on an interior page, with mention of Ogden as the point of vantage from which a trip across the great piece of engineering can be taken.

The magazine also carries pictures of the Utah salt beds, of Bird Island and other points of interest on the Great Salt Lake.

HALL CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

In Judge J. A. Howell's division of the district court this afternoon, appeared Philip R. Hall, charged with attempted burglary, the allegations in the information being that on November 18, 1915, he attempted to burglarize a saloon on Walk avenue.

The young man took the statutory time to plead and expressed the desire to have a bond fixed, whereupon the judge declared a bond in the sum of $500. The time for pleading was fixed for Thursday morning, at 10 o'clock.

WATSON PLEADS IN OWN DEFENSE

Charged With Sending Obscene Matter Through the U. S. Mails.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 30.—Thomas E. Watson, on trial in federal court, charged with having sent obscene matter regarding the Roman Catholic church through the mails, made his final plea for acquittal today.

Acting as his own counsel, he argued to the jury that the way in which he had employed certain words, called obscene by the prosecution, had kept them from that class. He drew from the prosecution a denial that the government attorneys were "protecting the Roman Catholic church."

Watson concluded with the statement to the jurors that in their hands rested the "banner of democratic institutions, republican principles and religious liberties."

Previously, on motion of the prosecution, the court ruled that only the question of whether or not Watson was responsible for mailing the articles mentioned in the indictment and whether or not they were obscene, was to be decided by the jury.

MAKING RECRUITS.

"You see, they tell us to eat less meat," remarked the English matron. "So I give my husband cheese and tomato fritters for his tea one day. Next day it's cheese and bananas. Then I give 'em cheese and macaroni. But men have no idea of making sacrifices. He looks at his cheese and bananas and says: 'Miserable, I'm over 50, but if you don't stop this I'm off to the blooming war. You can get meat there.'"

DOUBLE FEATURE PROGRAM ALHAMBRA Today

For today's program of the Alhambra there has been prepared a surprise such as few motion picture theaters these days can afford to give its audiences. Instead of the one picture, Evangeline, which the management advertised for today's feature, there will be two features, the additional one being nothing less than a repetition of "Bella Donna," the elaborate Lasky production, with Pauline Frederick leading the Alhambra audience spellbound with its magnificent setting and the romantic climaxes which each reel piled upon the other.

"Bella Donna" was announced for Monday only, but so powerful was the appeal of this picture to those who enjoyed it yesterday that Manager Skinner decided last night to repeat the showing today, including it with Evangeline on today's program, for the benefit of those who missed it Monday.

Between Evangeline, a story of poetic romance into which
